

I Wanted The Floor To Open Up And Swallow Me Whole...

My friend and I were reminiscing the other day about a holiday we took a while back to Madrid.

One particular night we were sitting in a local restaurant perusing the menu when my friend asked me if a certain dish contained onions or not as he was allergic.

Being the good friend I am I took it upon myself to find out.

I'm not sure where my new found confidence in my Spanish speaking abilities came from but looking back it could have more than a little to do with the fact we had just started our second jug of Sangria.

As the waiter approached we made eye contact and in my best pigeon Spanish I pointed at the dish on the menu and asked:

“¿Este plato contiene caballo?”

The waiter looked at me in disgust, spun on his heels and stormed back into the kitchen.

I was confused.

I could hear laughter from the tables around us.

Thankfully a girl on the next table spoke fluent English and explained my mistake.

“I think what you meant to say was... ¿Este plato contiene cebolla?”

I had asked the waiter if his family recipe handed down for centuries contained... “horse”?

To say I was embarrassed was an understatement.
